Trim systems for marine outboard motors include a trim plate which is adapted to be moved in a fore-and-aft direction relative to the lower surface of a cowling. Usually, the trim plate is disposed between an engine lower bracket and an engine lower part of the cowling and is provided with, in part, hydraulic cylinders which are adapted to move the trim plate in the fore-and-aft direction. Various devices have been suggested for transmitting force from an operator's foot to a trim plate by the use of hydraulic or pneumatic cylinders. Japanese Utility Model Laid-Open Publication No. 63-99864 discloses a trim system wherein, as illustrated in FIG. 6, a trim plate 2 is vertically disposed between an engine lower bracket 1 and an engine lower portion 4 of a cowling 3. In this construction, force applied to a hydraulic cylinder 6 through a rod 7 by a hydraulic actuator 5 is transmitted from the cylinder 6 through a rod 9 to a piston 10 of the cylinder 9. The piston 10 is provided on the lower end of a plunger 11 which is disposed within a cylindrical portion 8 of the cylinder 6 and within a through hole formed in the trim plate 2. The rod 9 is fastened to the trim plate 2 to maintain the trim plate 2 in a predetermined position when the trim plate 2 is operated. Since the trim plate 2 is not
